Anything that connects to the internet can and will be hacked as the saying goes, Information technology has greatly advanced in successive years and because of this increasing modernization, the data which were stored previously in physical form is now stored in the form of information in our computers. Global interconnectivity has become prone to many vulnerabilities or risks that can be exploited by criminals competitors terrorists and unauthorized agencies to access organizational resources. For combating the vulnerability caused by such cyber criminals non-banking financial companies need to make their cybersecurity robust. cybersecurity can be described as the utilization of technologies standard practices to protect information systems including data computers software programs and network from attack unauthorized access and modification destruction or theft. Financial sector faces almost three times the cyber attacks as compared to that of other industries.
